INTRODUCTION

- Climate change is critical to the African continent. The capacity to generate sufficient supply can not be attained because of climate change issues and we are in the midst of an energy crisis, we could not generate sufficient hydro electric supplies due to a fall in the water levels of Lakes and rivers.

CONTINUED

- crop yields in Sub-Saharan Africa are projected to fall by 20 percent due to global warming and climate change. It has been projected that as climate change pushes the world towards more extreme weather, more and more people would be exposed to recurrent disasters.
- shifting patterns of malaria and other vector borne diseases due to changes in rainfall patterns.
